

Hooray for Australia

Move over, Switzerland.

Australia seized the global title of having the highest "median wealth per adult" from Switzerland in Credit Suisse's 2018 Global Wealth Report. While a typical Australian might not feel like it, they are richer than a typical person in any other country. Aside from being relatively rich by global standards, the wealth in Australia is also more evenly distributed than most other countries. Wealth, in this report, is based on net worth which includes the sum of all assets including residential property, shares, deposits and super. All this means is that Australia continues to be a great place to do business.
