Small Businesses with No Employees

Many people think that small, no employee businesses are not desirable, which is not true. In fact, many people prefer them. Why? Because small no employee businesses are great for people tired of putting up with the hassle/paper work involved when you have employees. These small businesses are ideal for all types of people, including: those who have a hobby/passion, semi-retired people, artistic people, people who like to work with their hands, people who know bookkeeping, barbers, beauticians, travel agents, day cares, writers, health coaching, chore/errand services, microbrewery, personal trainers, special deliveries, business coaches and the list goes on and on.

Some of these small businesses might need an employee part-time or for special occasions, but don't forget that you can outsource these employees from employment agencies. You can also hire virtual assistants that you can remotely contract and train to do the tasks that you need help with. This will help to keep your free time free, and your employer obligations non-existent.

Another source of non-employee businesses is franchises. There are many franchises that do not require employees, but have the advantage of having the franchisor train you and hold your hand. The advantage of a franchise is that you are part of a team of business owners, with all the advantages of being involved with a team, but no employees. The first business that comes to my mind is LINK; yes, you can start and run a business brokerage with no employees. Other franchises that LINK sells and don't require employees are advertising/promotion companies, automotive, business services, children services, cleaning, computer/internet, restaurants, health/beauty/fitness, home services, retail, sports/recreation, travel, wholesale/distribution and the list goes on.

Remember that approximately 75% of all businesses have no employees. In 2015 there were 24.3 million no employee businesses.

LINK Business sells many non-employee businesses. We have thousands, but if we don't have what you want, we can find it. So, if you are looking to buy a small business always use LINK because we are the best.
