

Small Business Optimism Reaches Eleven Year High. The Q1 Wells Fargo/Gallup Small Business Index

Small business confidence blasted off the day after the 2016 election and remained in the stratosphere for all of 2017, making last year an all-time record setter for the NFIB Index of Small Business Optimism. 2018 is off to an ever higher index.

“2017 was the most remarkable year in the 45-year history of the NFIB Optimism Index,” said NFIB President and CEO Juanita Duggan. “With a massive tax cut this year, accompanied by significant regulatory relief, we expect very strong growth, millions more jobs, and higher pay for Americans.”

The average monthly Index for 2017 was 104.8. The previous record was 104.6, set in 2004. That makes 2017 the strongest year ever in the history of the NFIB survey. And now as shown above the latest quarterly survey of small business optimism, the overall Index score came in at 107, up from 103 in November 2017, and the highest quarterly score since early 2007.

“We’ve been doing this research for nearly half a century, longer than anyone else, and I’ve never seen anything like 2017,” said NFIB Chief Economist Bill Dunkelberg. “The 2016 election was like a dam breaking. Small business owners were waiting for better policies from Washington, suddenly they got them, and the engine of the economy roared back to life.”
